

When will the ginger market recover

When will the ginger market recover?

At present, most of the ginger cultivation in the northern ginger production area is nearing completion. Farmers' time is gradually abundant, and their energy may be refocused on selling goods. However, recent prices and market conditions have not been satisfactory, prices have continued to decline, and I do not know when the turnaround will be.

First of all, judging from the transactions in the production area, the farmers were busy growing ginger a while ago, and the amount of goods on the market was not large, but the reduction in the supply of goods did not become an obvious benefit. Merchants' demand for goods is not good, and prices continue to fall.

Secondly, from the point of view of the sales area, although there are few local cases found at present, but the importation of overseas cases continues, the people are still more cautious. The willingness to go out has not been widespread and significantly improved. In fact, the volume of transactions in the production area has fallen, and prices have fallen, forming a vicious circular chain in which prices have continued to decline recently.

The cultivation of new ginger is about to end. On the balance of supply and demand, the supply gradually begins to increase. It is not known whether the demand is following up. But avoid panic shipments, which is harmful to the market without any benefit. Make a good sales plan and adjust it at any time according to the market. Whether it is sold or not, blind followers are undesirable. Please think twice.

